Quarterly fund commentary

After a prolonged period of calm, volatility has returned in earnest during the third quarter, leading to contagion and more unstable correlations within and across asset classes. Global equity markets experienced a challenging quarter as disappointing economic data across developed economies and China suggested a more difficult environment ahead for the global equity markets. Commodity prices in aggregate continued to fall, with the Bloomberg Commodity Index capping its worst quarterly loss since the depths of the recession in 2008. Exposure to bonds was the only consistent positive contributor to the fund's returns for the quarter as market participants sought perceived 'safe haven' from the continuing decline in commodity prices and the renewed volatility in equity prices. Exposure to commodities proved to be the largest detractor to returns for the period. Energy suffered the steepest price declines, as US stockpiles remain well above the five-year seasonal average, a weakening Chinese economy and the return of Iranian barrels added to fear of a global oil glut. Agricultural commodities were weighed down by corn, wheat and soy exposures as improving weather conditions raised production estimates and a stronger dollar added additional prices pressure. Industrial metals, including both copper and aluminum, have declined further, likely due to concerns over China.

Risk Warnings

The value of investments and any income will fluctuate (this may partly be the result of exchange rate fluctuations) and investors may not get back the full amount invested. Whilst the overall risk of the fund intends to be consistent with that of a balanced portfolio of equity and debt securities, this may not be achieved. The fund will make significant use of financial derivatives for investment purposes in excess of the value of the portfolio that could lead to large fluctuations in the value of the fund. The fund uses derivatives to gain leverage which can potentially be up to three times the value of its net assets. The fund will gain exposure to commodities to diversify the risk of the fund. Commodities are generally considered to be high risk investments and may result in large fluctuations in the value of the fund. Debt instruments are exposed to credit risk which is the ability of the borrower to repay the interest and capital on the redemption date. The risks described herein are the fund specific material risks. For more information please consult the current fund and share class specific Key Investor Information Document (KIID) and for a complete set of risks the current prospectus. If you are unsure of any of these risks please contact your advisor.
