Quarterly fund commentary

Sentiment towards Latin American equity markets was initially soured by concerns over US President-elect Trump's trade and immigration policies. By December there were signs of confidence slowly returning towards the asset class, bolstered by rising commodity prices and a belief that a stronger US economy would be supportive towards developing countries. Equity performance within the region was mixed with gains being registered in the equity markets of Brazil, Chile and Peru. By comparison, Mexico lagged on ongoing concerns that trade with its northern neighbour could be disrupted if the US imposed import tariffs. To combat rising inflationary pressures from a weaker peso, Mexico's central bank followed the US Federal Reserve in raising interest rates during the quarter. Our holdings are concentrated in Brazil and Mexico. We also have significant positions in companies based in the smaller economies of Colombia, Chile and Peru. The fund's diversified approach is reflected in sector positioning, which is spread across a broad spectrum of industries. We are finding the utilities sector particularly interesting due to an improving regulatory environment. We also favour the energy sector which, in our view, is offering some attractive long-term opportunities.
